GRADUATE SCHOOL, ARTS

WELCOME TO GRADUATE SCHOOL, ARTS

Graduate School, Arts offers doctoral education for the research disciplines of the Faculty of Arts within all areas of the humanities, theology and educational studies.

Graduate School, Arts is one of five graduate schools at Aarhus University. The work of the Graduate School is carried out in the School of Culture and Society, School of Communication and Culture, and Danish School of Education. Graduate School, Arts is organised in eight PhD programmes covering a variety of fields ranging from Anthropology, Global studies, Human Security studies, Religion, Sociology, Heritage Studies, History, Archaeology, Classical Studies, Theology, History of Ideas and Philosophy to Art, Literature, Cultural Studies, ICT, Media, Digital Design, Communication and Journalism, Language, Linguistics, Communication and Cognition, and Pedagogy, Didactics, Learning and Education.

The Graduate School has extensive research collaboration with public institutions and the private sector, and conducts ordinary PhD programmes as well as industrial PhD programmes.
2020 has in all regards been an odd year. Due to the pandemic the university has been closed down for months and most of our PhD students have struggled together with their supervisors in times where we all work without access to our offices. We meet and teach online, but as PhD students you also have to balance writing a thesis at home, collecting material in more or less closed archives, finding alternative ways to do research stays/field studies abroad, moving interviews online, depend on e-books, and re-arranging and updating the PhD planner when things are changing, just to mention a few of the difficulties during the last year. No doubt it has been challenging – and still is. If not before, we now know the importance and value of the daily life in all the PhD programmes, the units, departments and shared offices; the ability to attend courses and conferences, doing field work, talking face-to-face to colleagues and all in all enjoying the inspiring academic life, which is hard to establish and maintain, when we are not present at the university, when we cannot travel and have to do all our work online. In spite of all the challenges, we have managed to re-arrange and still uphold as many activities as possible including alternative PhD courses. Thesis defenses have been done via Zoom, and even though we prefer the physical defense, the online version has also shown to have some advantages. For instance; committee members have saved both time and CO2 not having to travel for a physical event, and it has been possible for a large number of spectators to join the defenses from all over the world, and they have. Our defenses are followed by a large international public.

In 2020 we have recruited fewer than the previous years. This is an intentional drop due to budget constraints, but we expect to reach a level of enrollment of new PhD students comparable to previous years within less than a year. In spite of the Corona challenges, I am happy that 56 PhD degrees have been conferred in 2020 at The Faculty of Arts compared to 64 in 2019 and 46 in 2018.

In regards to internationalisation, our total of enrolled international PhD students is 22% in 2020, this is a slow but steady rise. We have also managed to uphold a level of 77% of the 56 PhD students that graduated in 2020 who had completed a research stay abroad. Many of the still enrolled PhD students planned stays have been either postponed or cancelled. We continue to develop the database (ResearchAbroad) where it is possible for PhD students to share their international experiences. It is our hope that this database will be of value for future PhD students while they start the process of planning their research stay. There will of course in the next couple of years be a drop in regards to how many have been able to do an international research stay. Virtual or online research stays have already been set up, where PhD students join meetings and attend activities at international research institutions that have moved all their activities online. I hope PhD students will also take the time to share learnings from these experiences in the aforementioned database as well. Possibly we will see more of these types of innovative ways of internationalising in the future. The same counts for PhD courses and PhD Summer Schools offered jointly and online.

In the report you will be able to find numbers and figures relevant to our Graduate School. And I also encourage readers to browse through the lists of both enrollments and graduates, as it gives an insight into the diversity of students and PhD projects that we have at the Faculty of Arts.

Anne Marie Pahuus, Head of Graduate School, Arts
The activities of the Graduate School are based at the two campuses of the Faculty of Arts in Aarhus and Copenhagen. The Graduate School is organised in eight multi- or inter-disciplinary PhD programmes, each managed by a programme director. A PhD Committee elected by the faculty and PhD students monitors the quality of supervision and programme activities.

PhD Committee

The main tasks of the PhD committee are to approve PhD courses, draw up internal guidelines for the GSA, and recommend the composition of the PhD assessment committee.

The general aims of the committee as a political entity are to identify strengths, weaknesses, challenges and opportunities in the management of this area. The committee held five meetings in 2020 to evaluate the quality of its PhD courses and dissertation seminars (through meetings with the directors of the PhD programme), to respond to the faculty’s talent-development strategies, to discuss related issues with the Head of GSA and to monitor and present the work of the PhD administration.

- 249 PhD students (31 Dec. 2020)
- 8 PhD degree programmes
- Three-year programme (5+3)
- Four-year programme (4+4)
- Industrial PhD programme

PhD Programmes

The PhD students at the GSA are affiliated to relevant research environments, which are organised at the Faculty of Arts into research programmes within the departments. Normally the PhD students will have the same affiliation as their principal supervisor (Campus Aarhus or Campus Emdrup, Copenhagen).

The GSA is organised in the following eight PhD degree programmes:

- Anthropology, Global Studies and the Study of Religion
- Art, Literature and Cultural Studies
- Didactics
- History, Archaeology and Classical Studies
- ICT, Media, Communication and Journalism
- Language, Linguistics, Communication and Cognition
- Learning and Education
- Theology, History of Ideas and Philosophy

The directors of the PhD programmes are responsible for the administration of the graduate programmes. The directors participate in decisions regarding admissions, academic performance, and the application of the regulations and policies of the Graduate School.
ART, LITERATURE AND CULTURAL STUDIES

This programme covers academic studies of the arts in the broadest sense: visual art and culture, including painting, photographic art and more recent media such as film, video and computer; theatre, including performance and dance; music, from classical music to modern rhythmic music and sound studies; literature, in all genres, from national and area-defined contexts to world literature; and rhetoric. The programme also welcomes museological studies, trans- and inter-medial studies, art and aesthetic theory, as well as cultural studies, cultural analysis and neuro-aesthetic approaches. There are no theoretical or chronological barriers for the programme, which includes historical, contemporary and trans-historical projects. Likewise, the programme encourages both projects from individual disciplines and projects aiming at bridging different disciplines.

ANTHROPOLOGY, GLOBAL STUDIES AND THE STUDY OF RELIGION

Covering the fields of Anthropology, Global Studies and the Study of Religion, a particular strength of this PhD programme is interdisciplinarity. Through the study of culture, society, politics, cognition religion and languages as well as international development, the programme offers unique opportunities for the pursuit of new directions in and across the associated disciplines, including areas such as ethnography; memory studies, identity politics, visual anthropology; digital and art based methods; medical anthropology; gender studies, populism, aging and welfare; democracy, globalization, transnational mobility; contemporary religion and contemplative traditions; history of religions; the anthropocene; human security and post-conflict studies. Theoretical interests are founded on a combination of solid social and human science theories, and range from discourse analysis, phenomenology, constructivism, post-structuralism, practice theory and grounded theory over various comparative, sociological and history-based approaches to cognitive science.

DIDACTICS

This programme focuses on the analysis of practice and policy in education, in particular the aim, content, form, organisation and performance of learning, teaching and professional development in school and pre-school settings, and analysis of school development and teacher training. Research on subject-specific (e.g. mathematics) and area-specific (e.g. sustainable development) teaching and learning in institutionalised settings at all educational levels forms an important part of the programme. Furthermore, research on workplace learning, career guidance and counselling and adult and vocational education is central in the programme, in relation to both formal and informal learning and teaching.

The programme engages with a wide range of research approaches grounded in research traditions taken from didactics and curriculum studies, and from the various forms of educational research inspired by sociological, philosophical and psychological disciplines.

HISTORY, ARCHAEOLOGY AND CLASSICAL STUDIES

This programme has its basis in the disciplines of Archaeology (Prehistory, Classical and Historical Archaeology), Heritage Studies, Classical Philology, and History. It thereby spans the study of the human past in its entirety, covering a variety of different methodological approaches, including digital methods. The programme has a strong commitment to interdisciplinarity. Research foci in the programme include (but are not limited to): Material Culture; Cultural Mobility; the European Bronze Age; Technology, Settlement and Landscape in Prehistory and History; Classical Philology; the Mediterranean world in Antiquity; Late Antiquity; the Viking Age; Buildings, Housing and Medieval Society; Cities and Rural Areas throughout History; Cultural History of Early Modern Denmark; Political Culture in the 19th and 20th Centuries; Contemporary History; Development Aid, Sustainable Heritage Management, and Transnational History. Researchers active within the programme furthermore offer world-leading expertise in the study of Scandinavia as a cultural and historical region, including its global relations.

LANGUAGE, LINGUISTICS, COMMUNICATION AND COGNITION

The theoretical core of this PhD programme is linguistics in a broad sense. It includes all significant language-related aspects of psychology, physiology and society. The programme covers a wide range of research areas such as phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics as well as conversational analysis, first and second language acquisition, language pedagogy, translation and translation studies, interpreting, business communication, health communication, neurolinguistics, psycholinguistics, sociolinguistics and text linguistics. Adjacent areas such as cognition, cognitive science, philology, rhetoric and semiotics are also included. The programme furthermore offers a fruitful collaboration between the traditions of functional and formal linguistics.

PhD administrator: Marianne Hoffmeister, mho@au.dk

LEARNING AND EDUCATION

The programme in learning and education is concerned with more or less institutionalized processes of learning in a wide variety of formal and informal educational settings as well the wider contexts - organizational, political, economic, social, cultural, philosophical and historical - in which these are embedded. The programme covers a multidimensional research area, ranging from educational research to interdisciplinary approaches (such as sociological, historical, anthropological, psychological, and philosophical perspectives) to learning and education. Projects under the programme are mostly, though not exclusively, empirically based and must be grounded in more fundamental theoretical questioning and methodological reflexivity. The programme also includes projects with an intervention-oriented approach. Ranging from politics of education, school management and internationalisation to processes of becoming among pre-schoolers and special education, epistemological and philosophical approaches to education and learning, history of education, and studies of migration, intercultural diversity and minority education, this programme covers a range of themes and perspectives on learning and education, within and beyond Denmark. The programme offers a selection of courses and seminars and works in close collaboration with the national doctoral training network in education.

THEOLOGY, HISTORY OF IDEAS AND PHILOSOPHY

The PhD programme hosts doctoral research relating to the disciplines of Theology, History of Ideas and Philosophy. Theological research deals with the formation, history, and contemporary interpretation of Christianity in church, culture and society. Approaches include Biblical studies, church history, the history of Christian ideas, mentalities, and doctrines, ethics, the philosophy of religion, practical and empirical theology, as well as ecumenical and constructive theology. Research in the History of Ideas deals with the expression, preservation, and change of human ideas over time. Currently researchers work with a wide range of humanistic and social issues including science and technology, politics and society, culture and aesthetics, and existence and religion. Philosophical research investigates human experience and our understanding of the world by studying human phenomenology, conceptual, theoretical, and practical norms, values, and practices. Researchers are currently working on projects within and across areas such as epistemology, metaphysics, philosophy of cognition, ethics, political philosophy, Idealism and Post-Idealism, and philosophy of science, medicine, and technology in society. The PhD programme as a whole provides a multi-faceted interdisciplinary environment for doctoral research.

ICT, MEDIA, COMMUNICATION AND JOURNALISM

The PhD programme engages with projects and provides courses within the study of information and communication technology, media and journalism. The PhD projects include studies of surveillance technologies, human-computer-interaction, digital aesthetics, digital design, computational thinking, the internet, film, television, videos, podcasts, social media, games, AI, journalism, and more. As the subject area is incessantly changing and dynamic, many of the projects are cross-disciplinary and influenced by both economic, political, social and cultural developments. Research in the programme is therefore also characterised by the use of many different methodological and theoretical approaches including qualitative, quantitative, computational, and practice-based methodologies across the fields of sociology, the humanities, and computer science.
